MEETS DEATH ON HIS WAY TO WORK

Edward T. Gallagher, 70, of 68 Risel street, was found dead at Pier 46, in San Francisco, by a longshoreman, last Saturday morning about 9:30 o'clock.

Gallagher, a special officer in the employ of the Morse Patrol, was on his way to work at Pier 48, when he was stricken with a heart attack.

The men at Pier 48, where he should have reported for duty at 11 P. M. last Friday, notified his relatives that Mr. Gallagher had not reported to them at that time, midnight. Mr. Wheeler, Gallagher's brother-in-law, walked with him to the car line at Oliver and Mission streets, and saw him board the car. About 9:30 relatives were notified that Mr. Gallagher had been found dead, lying face down on a runway beside the railroad track on Pier 46.

The San Francisco deputy coroner took charge of the remains, which were later identified and removed to the Lasswell undertaking establishment.

Gallagher is survived by his wife, Bertha Gallagher, and a sister, Mrs. Alice Thornburg, of Morse street. His parents died when he was very young and he was raised by an aunt. Mr. Gallagher was a native of Newberry Port, Massachusetts, and was a member of the Odd Fellows in the East.

The funeral was conducted from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell & Co., last Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment was in Olivet Memorial Park.

CRAZED PAINTER MURDERS YOUTH

Believed to have been suffering from the delusion that his 24-year-old stepson, Jules, had a great enmity for him, Thomas T. Swarts, 62, San Mateo painter, last Saturday killed the youth with two blasts from a double-barreled shotgun.

The painter's wife, Mrs. Florence Swarts, was awakened by the creaking of the kitchen screen-door, according to her story. As she arose to investigate she heard the roar of the gun, rushed to the window, and saw her husband emerging from an old converted bus in the back yard, where her son slept. He held the shotgun in his hand.

Mrs. Swarts told police that her husband came into the bedroom, leaned the gun against the wall, and announced calmly: "I've just shot your boy."

Police found the youth's body a short distance from his bed. He had been shot through the head. Swarts, apparently in a daze, was taken into custody and lodged in the Redwood City jail on a charge of murder.

Mrs. Swarts, the mother of four other children, told police her husband had suffered a stroke recently and since then had suffered hallucinations of persecution. Fearing that he might commit some violence, Mrs. Swarts said she had removed a number of hunting rifles from their home at 1210 Fifth avenue, San Mateo. Swarts told the police he had rented the shotgun at a hardware store in San Mateo.

The dead youth, son of Mrs. Swarts by a former marriage, had been employed as a mechanic on a bus line. He was a former high school student and had won honors as a swimmer.

Stolen Car Recovered on Hillside Boulevard

While Officers Hilton and Sunderland were patrolling the city last Monday they found a two-door Nash sedan parked on Hillside boulevard, near the H. H. Smith lumber yard. The machine was taken to a Daly City garage, after the officers had communicated with the bureau of inspectors of the San Francisco police department, where they found the car had been reported stolen from the owner, Albert Krause, of Burmis Terrace, at Acton street. The owner was then notified by the police.

MAN HELD AS HIT-RUN DRIVER AFTER REDWOOD CITY CRASH

Walter Ford, San Francisco clerk, was held in the county jail last week in Redwood City charged with hit-run driving, as the result of an accident at Bayshore highway and Main street, Redwood City, in which two persons were injured.

According to the police there, Ford admitted being at the scene the time the accident occurred, but said he was not aware that his car had figured in the accident. He was questioned by Assistant District Attorney Harold F. Anderson while the police checked his car for evidence of damage.

AMERICAN LEGION HAS ANNIVERSARY

This month marks the fifteenth anniversary of the American Legion. In March, 1919, delegates from all organizations of the A. E. F. in France and Germany met in Paris to form an organization of World war veterans. The American Legion was the outgrowth of the conference.

The American Legion cherishes four great principles: Justice, Freedom, Democracy and Loyalty. Its pledge is service to the disabled, the distressed, the widowed and orphaned. The cause of service to community, state and nation is jealously guarded, and opportunity to serve is offered to all its members.

Justice is one of the noblest concepts of the human heart. True justice makes no distinction of persons. It recognizes neither high or low, neither rich or poor, neither the classes or the masses. Justice is the guiding star of life, and upon it rests the future of our nation. It transcends all boundaries of race and creed. To our sick and disabled comrades, justice has been and always will be the first concern of the American Legion. The rehabilitation of those men and women who so bravely offered their all to their country, the relief of those who have suffered by that sacrifice, is our hallowed duty. The Legion is ever mindful of its duty to the nation, and of the duty of the nation to those who answered its call in time of war.

Freedom is, among all the rights of mankind, held most dear. Freedom is an ideal of surpassing strength, for which our people throughout the years willingly have fought and died. It is the power of self-determination.

In the War of the Revolution, freedom was won for the people of the United States, and in the World war the torch of freedom led the American forces through the darkness of the conflict.

The American Legion has interested itself in freedom from injustice to the children of our nation. No nation can long endure that fails to care for its future citizens. No greater assurance for the future can be offered America than that promised by education and the care of the children. The Legion has taken a lead in the child welfare work of our country, and it labors toward the end that the youth of our nation may know that freedom from want, ignorance and tyranny are God-given rights and must be preserved, whatever the cost. It stands for equal opportunity for all, in a free country in which all may enjoy the blessings of liberty and may freely engage in the pursuit of happiness.

Democracy is government of the people, by the people, and for the people. Democracy is American in principle, and universal in appeal. It offers a voice in government to every citizen, and of its benefits every citizen may share.

To the American Legion, Democracy is concrete and actual. We express it in our meeting halls, where distinction of rank is unknown, and all are equal in a common service. In all things men are born equal, with certain inalienable rights, and a nation dedicated and true to this principle shall forever endure. Democracy can exist only where all do their share, where each citizen knows and accepts the responsibility of service to community, state and nation. The members of the American Legion have demonstrated their willingness to serve in time of war and are now serving in time of peace.

Loyalty is an attitude of the American Legion, as it is a first virtue of the soldier. It is as dear as justice is desirable, as freedom is.

Crocker P. T. A. Members Hold Interesting Meeting

The Crocker P. T. A. March meeting featured a program prepared by Mrs. J. E. Walker. Mrs. Ray Boyton, district safety chairman, gave a talk, "Safety of Our Children." Billy Johnson Pearce and Margaret Wagner, of Crocker school, read their Lincoln essays, which won prizes in the recent Lincoln essay contest. The Crocker school band, under the direction of Mr. Waters, played two selections.

The nominating committee elected to bring the names of the candidates for office for the ensuing year are Mrs. Pauw, Mrs. Jordan, Mrs. Coen, Mrs. Gaiter and Miss Soher.

Mrs. J. E. Walker will give a breakfast at her home, 478 Frankfort street, on March 27, from 9:30 to 11:30. The public is cordially invited.

The recent whist held by the Crocker P. T. A. At the Dairy Delivery Company was a big success with over eighty members and friends attending. Mrs. Wagner was chairman, assisted by Mrs. Roberts.

SMALLER "TAKE" MEANS GRANDER SPORT

By J. W. MARCHBANK

Encouragement of the breeding of the blood horse is no idle object in connection with the pastime of racing, although mild scoffing of the uninformed sometimes clouds the matter. Development in California's production of the thoroughbred has been gradual but no less sure in recent years.

A better pace in breeding is being set now that the "king of sports" is a recognized part of the life of the citizens of the state. From modest beginnings the industry is likely to go on to great things.

In order to maintain an even stiffer pace more nurseries must be established. That will come about when a larger number of sportsmen ship horses to Tanforan from the East and more of the home folk, thrilled by victories in their colors on the racing strip, purchase a broodmare or two.

Prizes to the breeder in the way of good purses if he happens to race his home-breds, or good prices if he prefers to sell his yearlings in the market, are important, and every effort is being made by the Tanforan management to bring about conditions favorable to achievement of such laudable purposes.

Reduction of the commission on the pari mutuel pools at the tracks of the state from twelve per cent to nine per cent is a necessity in the anticipated return of glorious days. With a change made by the Legislature along that line at its session next January a new era in racing can be confidently predicted.

HORSES ARRIVING AT LOCAL TRACK

Tanforan became very much alive this week as carload after carload of horses pulled into the San Bruno track for the Spring meeting, which opens Thursday, March 29, for a thirty day or more run. In addition to the many caloads of fine thoroughbreds, motor vans brought scores from various sections of the state.

Now nearly all the great stake horses, which participated at the Caliente meeting, just closed, are stabled at Tanforan ready to show their strides during the Spring session, which promises to be one of the most successful ever held in San Bruno. This meeting will be under the personal supervision of J. W. Marchbank, widely-known California sportsman and breeder of fine horses.

Most prominent among the arrivals from the south are: Bonny Grafton, On Rush, Prince Pest and Board-walker. They arrived the middle of this week and were stabled pending workouts previous to the opening of the meeting. When the bugle opens the Spring meeting there will not be an empty stall at the track. Not only that, but Track Superintendent Jack Dennis has been forced to refuse several hundred applications for stable room.

By the end of this week most of Tanforan's official family will be at the track ready for the meeting. The latest to arrive is Racing Secretary, Webb Everett from San Diego. George W. Schilling, presiding steward, is expected within a few days, and Judges Quigley and Macomber are to arrive early next week.

Dennis has prepared a softer track for the Spring meeting, which should meet with wide favor among stable owners. The receiving barn will be in service again this meeting, having proved a decided success at its inaugural during the fall.

A statement from the California Horse Racing Board this week expressed marked satisfaction with the Tanforan setup for the Spring meeting.

DECLARES UNDERPASS MENACE TO MOTORISTS

The Bayshore highway underpass at South San Francisco is one of the most dangerous menaces to motorists in Northern California, according to a resolution passed by the San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce and on file with directors of the chamber.

The resolution declares accidents are increasing so rapidly that the highway is becoming unsafe for public use and that the underpass is a contributing factor, because it is too narrow to handle peak loads and because of a blind curve.

Two fatalities and about fifteen other accidents have occurred at the underpass in the last six months, it is claimed.

Large Number on Honor Roll

Of students now enrolled at the San Mateo Junior College, sixty men and fifty-one co-eds won honor society ratings for high grades earned last semester, the college office announced last week. Students who completed their college work at Christmas and have left school have not yet been added to the list.

TEN CANDIDATES FOR CITY COUNCIL

Ten candidates are in the race for the office of City Councilman at the election to be held in Daly City on Monday, April 9. Four Councilmen are to be elected, one for the short term and three for long terms.

The candidates who have filed for the race for City Councilman are: Bernard J. Adams, Ernest J. Armando, J. M. Callan, Andy P. Chesney, George M. Connolly, Fritz Hanson, H. H. Smith, Paul Selmi, Henry Sundermann and Julius Twisten.

BOARD INTERESTED IN LABOR PROBLEM

The San Mateo county board of supervisors last Monday took action designed to block impending labor trouble on the coastside of the county, when the vegetable picking season opens there within the next few months.

They adopted a sanitary ordinance regulating the establishment of camps on the coastside, and making it mandatory for anyone desiring to establish a camp to get a permit from the board of supervisors, upon the recommendation of the county executive.

It was also decided that a county arbitration board be appointed to handle all labor disputes that may arise in the county.

The action of the supervisors came in face of threatening labor trouble on the coastside when the pea-picking season there opens. Several months ago labor trouble on the coast was averted by police action which brought a compromise between the growers and the pickers, which the pickers said would last only until the pea-picking season opened.

The pickers, during the recent labor controversy, said when the new season opened steps would be taken by the workers to secure higher wages, and in view of what has happened in other agricultural sections of the state, the county board said it wanted to be prepared for any emergency that might arise.

While the new ordinance is strictly a sanitary measure, supervisors said it would give police authorities ample ground to control the location of the pickers, who always establish camps and live in them while working in the fields.

A delegation of women from the county federation attended the session and explained the purpose of their request for an arbitration board.

STATION NUMBER THREE CELEBRATES BIRTHDAYS

Four times a year Station No. 3 have a birthday party in honor of the members who have a birthday near the date of the celebration. Thursday, March 15, a banquet was held in the fire house of station No. 3. Tables were decorated with white and green in honor of St. Patrick. Corned beef and cabbage with vegetables, including a salad, cheese cake and coffee, were served during the evening. Stories were told by all present and everyone expressed themselves as having spent a most enjoyable evening.

MINING IS SOLIDLY BEHIND PRESIDENT

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work.

Stalwarts of the mining industry are showing no inclination to desert the Roosevelt ship, even though everything connected with the New Deal has not worked out just as planned. The sentiment is widespread along the Coast that mining never had such a friend as the President in a powerful position. Leaders are saying:

"He is trying to do whatever is humanly possible for us, so why should we not stand by him through thick and thin?"

Earle W. Knight, managing editor of The Alaska Weekly, pertinently remarks in his column on the first page of that authoritative and snappy publication:

"Criticism which offers nothing better than that which it attacks is worse than useless. We are embarked on an economic voyage over an utterly uncharted course and to an unknown destination. We are not going to turn back to conditions as they were. What lies before us depends in a large measure on the masses of our citizenship. In the absence of brains with which to do a better job of steering the ship of state I can think of nothing better than to give the President the utmost measure of co-operation. How many of you would like to return to March, 1933?"

That's speaking right out in meeting. It is typical, too, of the utterances of mining men on every hand. They have been with the President from the start, and they are still with him, heart and soul.

Millions have been put to work under the policies of the Federal Administration and still further improvement is probable before long. I have said on former occasions that at least six million hardy youth and men can make a living, and a good one, on the five hundred thousand square miles of territory of Alaska, and I reiterate that statement. Manufacturing industries cannot absorb all the idle, but agriculture and mining will come pretty close to doing it.

While back, George M. Pearson, Minister of Labor and Mines, British Columbia, showed he had thoughts in the same channel. He expressed the opinion that a plan can be devised whereby many men now on the relief rolls could be given an opportunity to help themselves, with benefit to the province and material decrease in expenditures for unproductive labor. In an interview with Sidney Norman of the Vancouver Sun, Mr. Pearson said:

"Training of our young men to take part in the upbuilding of the mining industry is a patriotic duty of its leaders. We must encourage the kind of loyal labor that believes in the principles of our government and thus bring industrial peace and contentment to all the province. That can best be done by our industrial leaders making it part of a consistent program to fit into the various basic industries of the province as many of our young men as is possible. They are our hope. We have given them physical and educational advantages at heavy expense. No more profitable investment was ever made, if we can but find employment for them."

The mining boom in the Cariboo is being exploited in the columns of "Liberty" and other well known publications. Over in England, too, prolific writers are devoting space to the return to the old-time mining camps up north. The London Daily Telegraph points out that a stretch of seventy years lies between the first gold excitement in the Cariboo and the latest.

Look Out For Woman Seeking Old Jewelry

A dark complexioned woman is making a house to house canvas for old gold and jewelry. She leaves the house with the article and says she will return the next day and tell the owner what the article is worth. But she never shows up.

The members of the police department are on the lookout for this woman, and request that should anyone come in contact with her that they notify the police department. Telephone Randolph 4212.

WOMAN GETS POSTOFFICE JOB

Mrs. Annie Griffiths, wife of H. D. Griffiths, editor of the Half Moon Bay News, is the new postmistress of Half Moon Bay. She was notified of the appointment in a telegram from Washington last week and succeeds Col. Felix B. LaCrosse. LaCrosse is reported to have sent his resignation to Washington two weeks previous.

ODDS AND ENDS OF THE WEEK'S NEWS

Lee Roy Javine, 17, is in the county jail at Redwood City, following a fight Saturday night in the C. C. C. camp at Crystal Springs Lake, which sent Philip Adler, 17, a fellow worker, to Mills Memorial hospital with stab wounds. Physicians say the victim will recover.

Less than half a dozen persons were injured in San Mateo county traffic accidents over the week end, according to a check of police and hospital reports.

The annual spring flower show sponsored by members of the Burlingame-San Mateo Flower and Garden Club will be held May 6 and 7.

Marooned all night on Sherman Island, near Antioch, three Burlingame fishermen reached Pittsburgh safely after fears had been felt for their safety.

Paul Thorne, veteran seaman, who once saved his life by swimming for hours in a storm-swept sea, drowned in the calm waters of San Francisco bay, a few feet from shore, last Sunday.

Joseph Upton, of San Francisco, was killed on Thursday night of last week when an automobile in which he was riding with James J. Anglin overturned on the Skyline boulevard just west of Crystal Springs lakes. Anglin and Miss Maria McMahon, a passenger, suffered severe lacerations.

Eddie Karnes, aged 4, was bitten by a dog and painfully injured while riding a tricycle at his home in Lomita Park.

An allowance of $150 a month for the support of an 8-year-old girl who, she claims, is the daughter of Jack Kearns, is sought in a $23,400 suit filed in Los Angeles by Miss Elizabeth Williams, 45, against the veteran prize fight manager.

Richard Boyd, 48, was found dead at the foot of a flight of stairs at his home in San Francisco, his neck having been broken. Police believe that he stumbled and fell down the stairs.

A note left by E. F. Kiessling, 55, Sonoma county rancher and retired Oakland publisher, revealed that he had taken his own life, near Santa Rosa, because of the "persecution of game wardens and others."

Two bathing beaches will be built by dams in the San Mateo County Memorial Park in time for the summer season, when the park facilities are in greatest demand.

Early re-establishment of the San Mateo park bus line is proposed as a result of support promised Ray Kelly, operator of the company, by local merchants.

The famous "million-dollar gold plate dinner" that dazzled New York society in 1910 and aroused a storm of protest from the pulpit was recalled at Pasadena last Saturday with the death of Mrs. Bradley Martin, the daughter-in-law of the hostess.

SERRA ROAD SUIT FATED FOR REVIEW

A writ of review on a San Mateo county court decision on the value of property wanted by Joint Highway District No. 10 for extension of the Junipero Serra boulevard was filed with the district court of appeals on Thursday of last week by Annie H. Darbee, owner of some land used for vegetable gardens. The petition for the writ alleged that Superior Judge Franklin Swart set the price of $40,461.20 in a condemnation suit. She contended the true value to be $52,000.

PIONEER RESIDENT PASSES ON

Mrs. Lottie Langley, of Irvington street, beloved wife of Charles H. Langley, passed away in St. Luke's hospital last Wednesday morning. Mrs. Langley was in the hospital undergoing treatment and her illness was not thought to be serious, but she took a sudden turn and passed to the beyond. Mrs. Langley is survived by her husband, her sisters, Mrs. Carrie N. Thomson, of Sacramento, Margaret Beattie, of Tracy, and a brother, Harry N. Shields, of Oakland. Mrs. Langley was a native of Pennsylvania, a member of Crocker Chapter No. 382, O. E. S. Mr. and Mrs. Langley have made their home in Daly City for many years. Services will be conducted from H. F. Suhr & Co., 2919 Mission street, Saturday. Interment will be in Woodlawn Memorial Park.

COUNTY MEMORIAL REDWOOD PARK

The County Memorial Redwood Park of 310 acres is on Pescadero Creek between La Honda and Pescadero. These "monarchs of the forest" are patriarchs, too, in double sense, for these individual redwoods, the oldest living things on earth, are all of a family—the Redwoods—which lived on this earth when dinosaurs roamed about, as proved by the fossilized remains of them found together. Ninety per cent of the reproduction of the sempervirens or Coast redwood is from root saplings of the mother tree or stump, although the sempervirens is cone bearing.

In this vicinity once lived Chief Pomponio and his tribe of Indians. Nearby Pomponio Creek preserves but does not honor his name.

Annual Report Given At P. T. A. Meeting

The Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande P. T. A. held its regular meeting on Tuesday afternoon, March 20. All annual reports were given by the chairmen. Mr. R. L. Crane, District Superintendent, gave a short talk. The unit is placing a copy of "Child Welfare" Magazine in the Daly City library each month for the convenience of all patrons.

The following officers were elected for the coming year: President, Mrs. Pearl Jones; Vice-President, Mrs. Fannie Kanter; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Grace Hill; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Winifred Evans; Financial Secretary, Mrs. Lily Thom; Treasurer, Mrs. Kathleen Brown; Historian, Mrs. Emma Sorg; Auditor, Mrs. Ellen Wise; Parliamentarian, Mrs. Maude Hanselman.

The membership is well over 100 at present. The class credited with the most new members of the mothers will be given a party next month. Much interest is being shown in this intensive drive. The P. T. A. plaque was won this month by the kindergarten room under Mrs. Cope.

The delegates elected to the District convention, to be held in San Mateo Junior College, April 19 and 20, are: Mrs. Pearl Jones, Mrs. Anna Legge, Mrs. Fannie Kanter, Mrs. Marguerite Woodside, and the President, Mrs. Maude Hanselman.

Mrs. Ada Eade, character education chairman, read a most interesting and helpful paper on training our own selves and the influence and examples we give our children. Also a short lesson on "Obedience."

The Sewing Club will not meet next Tuesday on account of vacation. But the club will meet on Tuesday afternoon, April 3, at the Woodrow Wilson school.

Several members attended the District meeting held in Burlingame last Friday. Several state officers were present and gave short talks, including State President Mrs. W. J. Hayes; First Vice-President Mrs. C. H. Turner; Third Vice-President Mrs. O. M. Robertson; Historian, Mrs. F. R. Schaffer; Parliamentarian, Mrs.

Lukas; Parent Education Chairman, Mrs. H. R. Archibald.

Visiting District Presidents were: First District President, Mrs. O. H. Scragen; Tenth District President, Mrs. James K. Lytell.

The main speaker of the day was Prof. Ichiboschi, Professor of History of Stanford University. His talk on "International Peace" was very interesting and instructive.

Mrs. J. J. Garland, District President, presided in her always gracious and interesting manner. G. J. H.

glorious, as democracy is practical. It is a first requisite of a citizen. Loyalty to country, and self, is the basis of true Americanism. The American Legion demands of its members a submergence of self in the good of the nation. Disloyalty and oppression are foreign to our ideals, nor do we tolerate any form of radicalism or violence which aims to destroy our form of government. The spread of education, the principle of religious liberty, the protection of the individual in his ownership of property, the freedom of speech, the security of the citizen in the unrestricted exercise of his rights and duties as a citizen, are as cardinal and as precious to us as to the founders of our nation.

The Constitution, bulwark of our liberties and guarantee of our rights, is sacred to the Legionnaire. Be ever loyal to that which has given you protection, your opportunities and your home. The American Legion is in no sense a military organization. Composed, as it is, of members of every race, religion, occupation, and political conviction, it is obligated to strict neutrality on all questions concerning religion, politics, and industrial strife.

The emblem of the American Legion is the emblem of Americanism. Americanism is unity of love, singleness of allegiance, practicability of purpose, care of the distressed, the education of children, all directed to the promotion of a common good. It is that spirit of patriotism which shall ever preserve our land from the stagnation which is the death of peoples. In the emblem of the American Legion there is a great prophecy. It is the promise of the defenders of the Republic bespeaking the fullest good for each in the betterment of all. L. M. HILL.

LOCAL AMERICAN LEGION SEEKING NEW MEMBERS

Daly City Post No. 410, American Legion, will hold its regular meeting next Wednesday evening, March 28, at 8:15 o'clock. All members are urged to attend.

Have you brought in your member for the Commander or the Adjutant? Get busy and help your team win.

The San Mateo County Council of the American Legion are giving a big whist and dance in Redwood City Veterans' hall tomorrow night, Saturday, March 24. Everyone is urged to attend. Proceeds from this affair go to the convention fund. All Posts in the county are participating. Refreshments will be served. L. M. H.

Plans are being made in Stanislaus county, as well as throughout the San Joaquin valley, to meet any situation which may arise during the harvesting season due to the work of communists inciting workers to strike for more wages that their employers are willing to pay, says the Turlock Tribune.

Statewide inspectors of 1943 school buses, completed last week by the California highway patrol, showed a compliance of 94 per cent with all safety regulations and requirements fixed by state laws, with San Mateo county credited with 99 per cent.

Nevada marriages of California residents even though they do not conform with requirements of the California law, were upheld in Redwood City superior court by Judge Franklin Swart last Saturday.

Some public officials are hand-picked and machine made.

COUNTY HEALTH NEWS

Note—This is a weekly report from the San Mateo County Department of Public Health and Welfare, giving facts of importance for health protection, and a list of contagious diseases reported to the County Health Officer in the previous week.

Scarlet Fever (Scarletina)

Many people seem to have the idea that, whereas scarlet fever is a deadly menace, scarletina is a mild disease of relatively little importance. The fact is the two are different names for one disease, and the mildest case may transmit the disease to one who will develop a rapidly fatal type of illness.

Scarlet fever is caused by the streptococcus scarlatinae, a modified streptococcus found in the respiratory secretions, in the circulating blood during the first week of the disease, and (rarely) in the scales of the final stage. The germ is exceptionally resistant, and may be conveyed by milk, infected clothing or bedding, as well as by direct contact. One attack does not necessarily protect from others.

Complications Common

Scarlet fever is remarkably variable in different epidemics. It varies from the malignant type, with 100 per cent mortality, to mild, hardly recognizable type, with practically no mortality. This results in many "missed cases," which spread infection. Complications include:

1. Malignant type; may cause death in two days.
2. Kidney trouble in second or third week; may cause death or chronic nephritis.
3. Pus infection of ears, lymph glands, heart, joints (very common).
4. Nervous trouble, including chorea, progressive paralysis, etc.

In San Mateo county, in the years 1928-1932, scarlet fever was the fifth of all the reported diseases in frequency. Since January, 1934, we have had sixteen cases reported, which is about twice the average or similar periods in 1931 and 1932. All members of families in which scarlet fever occurs should have Dick tests made to see if they are liable to take the disease. If the test is positive, they should be immunized with three or four doses of scarlet fever vaccine. There is an efficient anti-toxin or the treatment of scarlet fever. Ask your doctor.

GIVE VARIETY TO SALAD DRESSING

First Concern Is With the Flavor of the Oil.

By EDITH M. BARBER

SALADS have become so much a part of the every-day meal plan that their dressings deserve to be discussed. Most of us use ready-to-use salad dressings, especially mayonnaise.

In these busy days we probably take the time to make the latter only for special occasions and content ourselves ordinarily with varying a ready-made dressing in various original ways. Whether we make or buy the dressing, we, of course, first of all are concerned with the flavor of the oil.

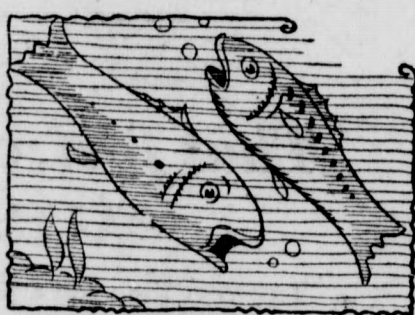

Those of us who are fond of the flavor of olive oil know that we must be careful in our choice. The Italian oils are more highly flavored than the French oils, and of course both of them must be fresh. They should always be kept after the can is opened in the refrigerator to prevent rancidity. The other vegetable oils made from cottonseed or corn are bland in flavor and need to be seasoned well to give them individuality. These oils are used as the basis of most commercial salad dressings, particularly because they "hold up" well under storage conditions.

In making your own salad dressings you may use either vinegar or lemon with the oil. The choice of the vinegar is important. A tarragon, a malt or a wine vinegar each has a distinctive flavor which it will transfer to your dressing. The proportion of vinegar to oil for French dressing is one to three, but be careful not to make too sour a dressing. This is a fault common in hotels and restaurants and you will find a great difference in the ready-mixed French dressings on the markets. Most ready-to-use French dressings have mayonnaise mixed with them for thickening purposes. A small piece of ice added to your own dressing will serve the same purpose.

In making mayonnaise you will find that the choice of vinegar or lemon juice will make a great difference in the flavor, as will also the amount of mustard which you use. In choosing commercially made dressings you will find a great variation in their season-

Girls Darker Than Boys, Expert Finds

London.—Girls are darker in coloring than boys.

This is the conclusion reached by an English research worker after fourteen years of observation. Other facts discovered in this connection are that in all physical measurements except stature, the boys have an advantage over the girls in each group.

The sexes are equal in height up to eleven years, but with the earlier commencement of the girl's period of rapid growth it was found that they were taller than the boys between the ages of eleven-fourteen. After this age boys become steadily taller than girls.

ings. Many people like the highly seasoned dressings to serve with meat sauces or to mix with French dressing or with whipped cream to serve on special salads. Many housekeepers keep several kinds on hand, and as well, when they yearn for a home-made mayonnaise, make up a bowlful. The special trick in making mayonnaise is to have your oil and your eggs at the same temperature so that they will blend easily and not separate. In this case you will find that you can mix up your dressing in almost no time.

Any kind of salad dressing, whether it is of the French or mayonnaise type, may be varied by the addition of chili sauce, catsup, minced celery, green pepper, minced onions or tiny "birdseye" onion, by rubbing the bowl with garlic or by the addition of a little anchovy paste or caviar. Roquefort or any cheese of strong flavor may be mixed with French dressing and the other day I had a most delicious combination of chutney with French dressing.

Horseshoe Dressing.

½ cup mayonnaise
¼ cup cream, whipped
2 tablespoons horseradish
1 tablespoon minced chives or minced onion
2 teaspoons minced parsley
Fold cream into mayonnaise and add horseradish and chives or onion and parsley. Serve with a vegetable, fish or meat salad.

Thousand-Island Dressing.

½ cup mayonnaise
1 tablespoon tarragon vinegar
½ cup whipped cream
1 chopped hard-cooked egg
1 tablespoon chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons chopped cooked beet
1 tablespoon chopped onion
½ teaspoon minced parsley
Mix the ingredients in the order given and serve with lettuce or other salad vegetables.

Combination French Dressing.

½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon mustard
Paprika
½ teaspoon sugar
6 tablespoons salad oil
½ teaspoon onion juice
¼ cup chili sauce
2 tablespoons minced celery
2 tablespoons vinegar
1 minced hard-cooked egg
Mix the dry ingredients and add to the oil. Add the onion juice and vinegar and stir until it thickens. Add chili sauce, celery and egg. A small piece of ice added before stirring hastens the process of thickening.

ALWAYS allow mud spots to dry and then they can be quickly brushed or rubbed off without leaving any stain.

If too much salt has been added to soup slice a raw potato and boil it in the soup for a few minutes. The potato will absorb much of the salt.

Whitewashed walls may be easily papered if they are first washed with strong vinegar. The acid in the vinegar will attack the lime, making a rough surface to which the paper will adhere.

Where Miners Are Fed From Skies

Snowbound miners, at this outpost 15 miles from North Bend, Wash., depend in winter on airplanes for food, and were it not for aviation these men would perish since all trails are blocked to the outside world. The food is put in sacks, to which long red streamers are attached, so that they may be found in the deep snow, and then the sacks are dropped overboard, as landing is impossible.

Lights of New York

By L. L. STEVENSON

Wits and wags of this mad Manhattan are now using the telephone as an outlet for their humor. The repeal of the Volstead act may be a contributing factor. Or maybe it is merely urban prankishness. But at any rate many prominent persons, whose names appear in the directory, are being aroused from their slumbers between three and four o'clock in the morning and finding that instead of some message of importance, they are merely listening to an inane conversation. It's no use getting angry, the victims have found. The more angry they get, the greater the joke. The possibility of revenge is remote since the dial age protects identity to such an extent that a call can be traced with difficulty. And when it is traced, it generally leads to some pay station.

The telephone in the home of a man whose name is known in all the five boroughs and for a considerable distance beyond the confines of New York, rang stridently not many mornings ago. The wife answered. A serious voice demanded that the barking of a dog in that apartment be stopped. The lady protested that no dog was barking, that in fact, the family didn't keep a dog. Nevertheless the person on the other end of the wire insisted vehemently that a dog was barking. As the conversation continued, the lady became convinced that she was being made the victim of a joke. So she hung up and as she did so, threw the switch that shuts off the phone.

That, of course, was an excellent idea except for one thing—the lady didn't know that while the conversation had been going on, the husband had also thrown that same switch, which meant of course that the telephone was still ready for business. Not more than ten minutes had passed when it rang again. The same jokester was on the wire. But that time he wanted to know if the lady wished milk or cream in the morning. Now anyone who tries to get into telephone communication with that family after the members have retired, is out of luck. What a waggish town this is! It's really too bad, because there aren't any party lines.

Am reminded by the foregoing of a woman who once upon a time called up a certain newspaper correspondent, whose name and initials are the same as her husband's, and in great agitation inquired as to what could be done to keep inebrated gentlemen from out of town calling her home at all hours of the night and becoming indignant when informed that they were not known there. "Madam," replied the correspondent, "you can do the same as I do—keep your residence listing out of the directory." And it hasn't appeared since.

While, strictly speaking, this isn't supposed to be reminiscence day, am again reminded. Many times the telephone at my left rings and a soft feminine voice wants to know if an appointment can be arranged. Being a more or less sedate married man, before committing myself one way or another, I endeavor to establish certain facts. Not yet has a name the voice gave awakened a single memory cell. But invariably my queries have been followed by a request for my office address which of course has been granted. The result is always the same—the enquirer hangs up without delay.

Until today, those calls have been a mystery. But at luncheon time, while strolling along Forty-second street, light came to me, in fact, neon light. I happened to glance up at a red sign of a beauty and face lifting parlor, and staring at me was the same name as adorns the top of this column! And a lot of those voices did sound so interesting!

HOW IT STARTED

By JEAN NEWTON

"On All Fours With"

WHEN anything is on all fours with something else, we know that both are in conformity, that they agree and harmonize with each other. Another way of conveying the same idea is to say that they "square" with each other.

And it is in this latter expression that we find the historic origin of the phrase under discussion.

"On all fours with" is of Masonic origin, the metaphorical simile being an allusion to the completeness and harmony of the four sides of a square.

Fifty Famous Frontiersmen

By

ELMO SCOTT WATSON

The Founder of Nashville

"EACH one should do what seems to him his duty. As for myself, my station is here, and here I shall stay if every man of you deserts me." So spoke James Robertson, leader of the pioneer colony that had settled on the Cumberland river in Tennessee on Christmas day, 1779. There had been 256 men in the colony at first, but within 60 days 39 had fallen under the tomahawks of the Cherokees. Within a few more months 67 others had perished. Crops had failed and starvation loomed. Some of the settlers began to leave, and finally only 134 of the 256 were left. They tried to get Robertson to abandon his post, and the above was his answer.

It was characteristic of this Scotch-Irishman from Virginia who had settled in North Carolina in 1750. That spirit had carried him across the mountains with Daniel Boone in 1759 and had brought him back, after terrible hardships, to North Carolina to lead a party of settlers into the rich Watauga region and later still farther west.

The emigration of Robertson's settlers from the Watauga to the banks of the Cumberland in central Tennessee is one of the epics of the frontier. After all he had endured to plant that settlement there, he was not going to give up so easily. So, with his eldest son and two other companions, Robertson made his way to Boonesborough where Daniel Boone lent him powder and lead. He soon had need for it, for 1,000 hostile Cherokees swept down upon the fort at Nashville.

Then it was that Charlotte Reeves Robertson proved herself a worthy mate of the stout-hearted pioneer. In their attempt to capture the horses of the whites, the Cherokees left a gap in their ranks. Mrs. Robertson, rifle in hand and crouched in a look-out tower of the fort, seeing the stampede of the horses and the break in the Indian line shouted to the sentry: "Open the gates and set the dogs on 'em!" As the savages drew their tomahawks to fight off the dogs, the settlers fled to safety, whereupon Charlotte Reeves Robertson uttered her "thanks to God who gave to the Indians a dread of dogs and a love of horses."

There were a few more years of Indian fighting and then peace came to Tennessee. With it came honors to James Robertson—Washington made him brigadier general and he was Indian commissioner until his death. He died in 1814 but he had lived to see the colony which he had founded grow into a great commonwealth and enter the sisterhood of states.

"The Emperor of the West"

TO THE Indians he was "White Eagle"—six feet, two inches tall, with a constitution of iron and hair of pure white, a man of inflexible courage and unflinching honesty. To the white men of his time he was the "Emperor of the West," a wilderness king who ruled over 400,000 square miles, an empire which extended from California to Alaska and from the Great Salt Lake to British Columbia. To history he is the "Father of Oregon," more truly than is any other man who may be given that title. To the shame of two nations who owe him much he became in his declining years a "Man Without a Country."

All these was Dr. John McLoughlin. Like that other monarch of the empire of fur, Kenneth Mackenzie, who ruled at Fort Union in Montana, McLoughlin was a Scotchman who first served the Hudson's Bay company. In 1824 he was appointed chief factor for the H. B. C. in the Columbia river district of the Pacific Northwest. Abandoning Astoria, which had come into possession of the H. B. C. via the Northwest company, McLoughlin built Fort Vancouver farther up the river.

Here began his rule over his vast empire. He not only developed the fur trade, but he also encouraged the agricultural development of the Pacific Northwest. He ruled his subjects, both white and red, with firmness and justice and they in turn loved and respected "Emperor John" or "White Eagle."

Then American settlers began to drift into the Oregon country. More than one forlorn American fur trader and more than one hollow-eyed settler, gaunt from privation, found a generous host in the Scotch doctor and a reliable source of supply while they were carving a home from the wilderness. As an employee of the H. B. C. he should, of course, have expelled from the country this advance guard of American settlement. But he didn't.

So when the Hudson's Bay company learned what he was doing, the "Emperor of the West" was quickly dethroned. He was not even recognized as a British subject by the majority of his fellow-countrymen. More than that he was impoverished by his loans to the settlers who failed to repay him. In 1849 he tried to become an American citizen. But petty souls who could not forget that he had once ruled this country for a British company blocked him. Congress failed to confirm his title to lands near Oregon City, Ore., where he wished to retire in his old age and claim jumpers took them away from him. Five years after his death in 1857, the legislature restored those lands to his heirs. But it was too late to save the beloved Scotch doctor from dying, a broken-hearted old man, a man without a country.

GREATEST NATION IN THE WORLD

Albert Johnson, publisher of the Hoquiam, Washington, Grays Harbor Daily Washingtonian, who was for twenty years a member of the National House of Representatives, and on the committee for immigration and naturalization during that entire period, and chairman of that committee for twelve years, says:

This country is being daily criticized throughout Europe in every conceivable manner. Various newspaper cartoonists depict "Uncle Sam" as a veritable "Shylock," and the customs and mannerisms of the United States are prodigiously ridiculed. Yet, there are thousands of European immigrants who are annually waiting a chance to land on these shores.

Many laborers from the West Indies and from the Orient, who come over here on British vessels as seamen each year, stake their all in an effort to smuggle themselves into the United States. Some are successful, and are soon swallowed up and lost from the watchful eye of the immigrant officials in our larger cities.

Under our constitutional rights, we, the citizens of the United States, criticize our highest officials and growl about almost everything that is attempted to be done by law. In spite of our many misfortunes in the great collapse of five years ago, we are still the greatest and freest nation in all the world.

SMALL TOWN INDUSTRY

Many students of the trend of industry believe that as a result of ever-increasing congestion in the great centers of population, the next few years will witness an increasing movement of factories to less crowded sections.

This movement is, in fact, already going on, and many large manufacturing plants are now located in comparatively small towns. As a complement of this, it is also believed that farmers will gradually come to live more in organized communities, when good roads shall make it possible to go to and from their farms with greater facility.

Under such a combination of conditions, agriculture and industry would be brought into closer contact, to the benefit of both. In fact, as suggested by some students of this problem, with the growing use of machinery and electricity on the farm, less labor will be required, and a part of the farmer's time may be employed in industrial pursuits.

Something of this sort may be the ultimate solution of the farmer's problems, through increasing his earning capacity and consequently his standard of living.

BUSINESS PROBLEMS AND EDUCATION

Edward A. Filene, noted Boston merchant, philanthropist and social worker, addressed the recent annual meeting of the Department of Superintendence, National Education Association, at Cleveland, Ohio. In declaring that there should be a closer co-operation between industry and education, he said in part:

"Business men should be 'more humble' and less assertive in their 'assumption of a divine prerogative to give advice to everybody else.'"

Mr. Filene expressed the opinion that we are beginning to realize an ordered society in this machine age. "The day of economic order and social understanding has dawned," he averred. Other declarations made by him were: "We have at last discovered that it is the function of business not merely to offer goods for sale, but to enable the masses to buy. The problem will be worked out, not according to anybody's Utopian dreams, but with a direct and scientific approach to the social facts. The masses must have an adequate share of the wealth produced. They must have leisure, else they cannot consume the necessary things which, under science, have become available. The struggle is becoming consciously collective and it is to everybody's individual interest to see to it that everybody else's interest is considered."

FUTURE AUTOMOBILE MODELS

Some startling predictions concerning the appearance of automobiles of the future were recently made by a French manufacturer, who declares that present models are ridiculous from a practical standpoint.

This manufacturer states that automobile designs are based on the idea that it is merely and improved wagon or carriage, whereas it is an entirely new instrument of transportation demanding a complete departure from old conceptions of what a vehicle should look like. He says: "Automobiles have springs and axles because grandfather's carriage had them, but they are idiotic. The gear box is a horror."

He thinks the future automobile will have an all-metal body shaped like a submarine to reduce wind resistance, wheels enclosed, tires mounted over rolls of gum, air-brakes, no axles, no gear shift, seats in front with electric motor behind, using storage batteries which may be purchased at any cross-roads store, and so on.

Whether this manufacturer is correct as to details remains to be seen, but it is safe to say that the automobile of 1950 will be a very different machine, both in appearance and operation, from that of 1934.

RICH MEN WHO GIVE

It has long been the fashion for certain writers and speakers to criticize the American people for their commercialism—their desire to make money.

While it is true that the mere making of money is not a very high ambition, it must be remembered that it is through our genius for business that we have been able to provide the funds for innumerable things worth while, such as are not enjoyed by any other nation in the same degree.

Great sums devoted to educational, religious, charitable and artistic purposes have been made possible through successful business pursuits. Scientific research, the advancement of health measures, better homes, and the comforts and refinements of civilization generally have been due to the ability of our people to acquire money and to their willingness to spend it for these things.

Most of the high-brow critics of business obtained their education at colleges and universities endowed and made possible by successful business men. Think this over before criticizing.

LIBERTY AND CRIME

In their efforts to find an explanation for the increasing prevalence of crime, many thoughtful persons have concluded that the tendency to burden the public with a growing multiplicity of laws may account for much of the lawlessness which now prevails.

Speaking before an international convention of police chiefs at Colorado Springs, Dr. Carlton Simon said: "We can limit and harass human freedom to such an extent that even the normally balanced individual feels that he is oppressed and will seek unlawful means of expressing his personality."

Through the operation of innumerable laws and the activities of government agencies employed thereunder we are restricted, inspected, spied upon, investigated and caused many unnecessary annoyances which are resented by a people who love freedom.

If more attention were paid to apprehending and punishing real criminals, while allowing greater freedom from harassment to respectable citizens, we should doubtless have a more law-abiding and happier citizenship.

A REASONABLE EDITOR

After all is said and done, it must be admitted that the average small town editor is reasonable. He will agree with almost any proposition that is fair. He will even suggest several propositions and let the other fellow take his choice. This obliging attitude is well illustrated by an item in the Tribune, published at Altoona, Kansas, which says:

"Anyone owing this paper is requested to call and pay at once. Anyone not owing it is requested to call and subscribe and begin owing us at once. Anyone we are owing is requested to subscribe for this paper in advance for the full amount of the debt and pay us another year in advance, cash. Anyone who is not owing us and will not do so, is requested to move to North Dakota and make room for someone who will."

It's the EXTRA service that makes Automatic Gas Water Heating worth having

Gas costs so little when modern appliances are used. For example, an automatic gas water heater will provide hot water for shaving for fifteen mornings at a cost of one cent.

SO OFTEN in so many homes the service hot water can give is limited to meal-time kitchen use, once a week laundry use and the bath times for the family.

But modern homes and modern living demand full, all-of-the-day service of hot water automatically on tap. Hot water must render Extra Services. This is the day of gayer, lighter colored children's clothing that require almost daily washings. Silk stockings and lingerie that keep fresh and wear longer for the daily rinse in warm sudsy water. Linoleum floors, painted woodwork, tile floors—all need the preserving care of warm water cleaning.

Home economists tell us that the average home of today needs the on-tap service of hot water 150 times a day. There is but one way to have such hot water service. It is with an automatic gas water heater that keeps water stored hot within a heavily insulated tank.

Have you thoroughly gone into the details of how little a modern automatic water heater costs? Learn the facts. See your gas appliance dealer or consult a representative of this company.

BIG TOURIST TRAVEL INCREASE PREDICTED

Motor tourist travel this year may not set any new all-time records for volume, but reliable signs point to a distinct increase over last year and to the greatest tide of vacation travel that the country has seen for the last five years, according to the Touring Bureau of the California State Automobile Association. Discussing the travel outlook for the coming season, a statement by the motorists' organization comments as follows: "Evidence that recreational travel is responding to better times is provided both by the increase in touring to winter vacation objectives which was apparent during the recent season and by the number of inquiries now being received for routings in preparation for Spring and Summer trips. The number of such inquiries is running substantially ahead of the volume of trips being planned a year ago at this time.

"Reports from affiliated A. A. A. clubs at key points in the east and middle west concerning southbound winter travel activity reveal that all forms of transportation, by land, air, and water, have shown an increase credited to a general improvement of economic conditions. These clubs reported a forty per cent gain in the number of southbound routings as compared with the preceding winter.

"All of this can be accepted as a dependable indication that 1934 travel will be the heaviest in the last five years."

Another factor cited in support of the predicted travel gain is the forty-four per cent increase in new car sales which occurred last year and the buying impetus which has followed the various recent automobile shows. It is pointed out that a multitude of motorists are replacing old cars and will naturally be ready and eager to "go places" this summer.

That California will enjoy a substantial share of the expected motor touring increase is indicated by volume of visiting tourist travel which the state received last year. According to official reports, 121,176 cars bearing license plates of other states and foreign countries entered California last year, carrying approximately 400,000 passengers.

WATCH BATTERY WATER

When the water level in a car's battery is not maintained above the plates overheating will result, according to the Emergency Road Service of the California State Automobile Association. When the water level drops below the top of the plates a greater volume of current passes through the covered portions. This causes overheating and rapid deterioration.

THE GATE CRASHERS

By R. H. WILKINSON

© Bell syndicate.—WNU Service.

MAJORCO is a gay and romantic city at any time of the year.

But gayest and most romantic of all days is Dia Conmemorativo de Somjesta, a day of feasting and merry-making; a day of celebration and of paying homage to the memory of the nation's most revered hero—El Miguel de la Somjesta.

It is a day of solemnity, also.

For it is on this day, at the hour when daylight merges into dusk and dusk into darkness that the coffin of the honored and celebrated El Miguel de la Somjesta is removed from its tomb and paraded slowly about the walls of the inner temple.

It is a rite that has become a tradition, the most sacred of all functions to be sponsored throughout the year, attended and participated in by the nation's nobility.

It is a moment at which the most distinguished personages in all the nation bow to the admitted superiority of the great Somjesta.

The procession itself takes place within the walls of the temple.

It is as secret as it is sacred.

Only a chosen few have ever witnessed the spectacle, and those having first pledged their solemn oaths to maintain the trust down through the ages.

Thirty minutes before the procession is scheduled to get underway, a hush falls over the city.

And until a half hour following its conclusion the hush remains.

No word is spoken, no band blares from the carnival stands, no dancers hold gayly forth in the street. It is an hour of silence and of worship.

The hour for silence had come. Young Jerry Murdock and equally young Slim Darrell stood across the street from the temple gates and watched the chosen few file past the guards, with bowed heads and solemn looks.

Occasionally a guard reached out and tapped a spectator on the shoulder.

There followed a moment of delay while credentials were displayed and scrutinized.

Fifteen minutes passed, and Jerry Murdock nudged his companion.

"We'd better make a try now, if ever. The crowd's getting thicker," Slim Darrell nodded.

"Righto. Got your pass ready?" "Yes. Listen, Slim, it's pretty risky business. If we're caught they'll treat us badly."

"Should have thought of that a month ago. Too late to turn back now. Besides, if we get the pictures, the Post will jack our salaries to the limit. Come on."

He started across the street. Jerry followed.

Both young men were dressed in long flowing robes, their faces almost obscured in peaked hoods of the same material.

They looked for all the world like visiting monks.

They mingled with the crowds surging through the gates.

Slim was breathing a silent prayer of thanksgiving when suddenly he stopped.

A guard had seized his arm. Jerry, following directly behind, stopped also.

"Senor, your pass."

Slim did not lift his head.

Feigning a meditative state of mind, he reached carefully beneath his robe and produced the square of cardboard that he and Jerry had so carefully prepared on the night previous.

Breathlessly he waited what seemed like an eternity, while the guard, his face a mask of bewilderment, studied the card, turning it one way and then another.

Behind, the crowd was pressing forward.

"Gracias, Senor."

Slim felt the card pressed back into his hand.

He moved forward, uninterrupted.

"Boy, what a close one! The old man ought to double our pay for this."

"Better not crow till we get the pictures."

Slim stopped suddenly, looking around.

"Say, you don't suppose that Express Reporter got inside, do you?"

"Not a chance. Whoever he is, he's new at the game. We've been trying to crash that gate for three years. It doesn't seem likely a cub could do it on his first attempt."

Reassured, they mounted an iron staircase to a balcony overlooking the street.

There were others there ahead of them—a girl and two old men.

It was an excellent observation point, and the youths found vantage points close to the railing.

It was a tense moment.

They could hear the deep, measured roll of drums, they saw fantastically dressed figures leaping and cavorting in the street below.

Solemn high priests, wearing weird, hideous head dresses and masks and carrying beautifully carved wands, marched far in the lead of a litter, carried by eight handsomely costumed footmen.

The tiny movie camera was purring. Jerry leaned over and spoke tersely. "Save your film, Slim. This is only the beginning."

Slim grinned.

"No need to whisper."

"These jiggers can't speak English no more than that guard could read it. Here, get another film ready. I'm going to catch the whole of this if I have to hold them up with a gun."

Hastily he snapped open the camera lid, removing the used film.

Jerry thrust forward another, which was deftly inserted.

"Let would be best that the English take care. To be detected would mean death."

Both youths whirled.

It was the girl.

She was looking at them without turning her head.

Her expression revealed nothing, though they knew she had both heard and understood, was aware of their purpose.

"Queeck, zee priest!"

Some one was coming up the stairs. The girl's hand was extended.

Without hesitation Slim relinquished camera and film and turned away.

Behind them the priest had stopped. And in that moment an icy fear clutched at the hearts of the two reporters.

They saw vividly, mental pictures of the horrors of a Majorco dungeon prison.

Footsteps sounded on the stairs.

"He's gone. Zee camera."

Slim stared dumbly at the girl.

He wanted to say something, wanted to tell her how much they appreciated what she had done.

But already her eyes were back on the procession.

"Say, that girl was a little bit of all right, eh?"

"Saved us from a nasty mess. Wonder if we could find her again? Like to express our thanks. If it wasn't for her, we'd probably be rotting in one of those dungeon prisons."

...

They were back in their hotel room. The procession was over, and they had successfully got past the guard coming out.

Slim was opening the camera. Suddenly his eyes bulged.

He opened his mouth and started.

"What's eating you, feller?"

"The film! It's gone. It couldn't have been there when we shot those scenes!"

Jerry leaped off the bed and came across the room.

"Well, I'm a . . . An idea came to him. 'Slim! Do you suppose . . . Say, where's that first film?'"

"I gave it to you!"

"You did not! You gave it to the girl, and she still has it! Moreover, she removed the second roll when you handed her the camera. She didn't want us to get any more shots!"

Slim was staring like one in a stupor. "Jerry! That girl was from the Express!"

"Of course, idiot! The cub reporter! And did she play us for a couple of suckers! Oh, sure, she helped us out of a nice mess and got us in a worse one. I can see the old man's face now!"

"So can I. And there's not another parade until next year!"

In another room in the same hotel, a young girl removed a roll of film from her handbag, looked at her own reflection in a mirror and said, "Queek! Zee camera!" And laughed merrily.

With Accents of White for Spring

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

TO MOST women there is nothing more flattering than a dash of white to enliven the costume, be it either in the form of fetching little trimming details or worn in an accessory way. Wherefore, the prospects are that the fair sex will be appearing at its loveliest during the coming months, seeing that the new suits, frocks and ensembles are being pretty-fied with the most winsome white accents creative genius can devise.

There are so many phases of the white vogue to be considered, one scarcely knows where to begin to tell the story. For instance, there are the frothy little necklines which are making even the simplest spring daytime print and crepe, likewise sheer woolen frocks, take on infinite charm. Masses of flutings, ruchings and fine pleatings of sheerest organdies, swisses, mousselines and nets make it seem as if milady's spring-hatted head was rising from out a halo of billowy whiteness. Lace fixings, too, are lavished about throat, shoulders and arms as if to tell an admiring world that fashions, this season, are going decidedly feminine. Then there are the new lace and net jabot blouses, it is indeed a winsome touch of white which they are contributing to present-day modes.

In response to this hue and cry for white the new suits are being adorably trimmed with details of dainty white fur or perhaps topped with neckpiece of snow-white fur. A very attractive suit which expects to go stepping in the gay springtime is shown to the left in the picture. The material which fashions this costume is a cord-tucked rabbit woolen in black and white. This fabric, with rabbit fur woven into it, is very soft to the touch and its cord surface brings it right up to the moment in chic. Then, too, it is an unbelievably light weight, which is an other reason added to its good looks why style creators are showing such enthusiasm for these weaves. The white gajak scarf adds a touch of infinite chic. Its flyaway lines take their cue from the much discussed air plane and wing effects. The hip length box-jacket with swagger and die shoulder is a high-style note. With its horizontal use of the striping the modish wrap-around skirt contrasts pleasantly with the vertical and horizontal stripes of the jacket.

Ripped revers of ermine, a white-ribbed satin blouse together with a patrician styling makes the suit to the right an outstanding number. The manner in which the jacket fastens with a tie of self fabric is characteristic of new fashion trends. The hat with a forward movement to the brim has made its entry into the millinery realm.

And now we want to be telling you about the clever bag and scarf ensemble shown below to the right in the picture. It is made of white vel de lux, which is none other than the handsomest crinkled white velvet eyes ever beheld, and give ear to this—it's washable! Comes in colors, too, does this new summer velvet. You can wear the soft drapery triangular scarf in many effective ways. Fasten it to the front and the scarf drops to the back between the shoulders in the new monk-hood lines which designers are so widely featuring this season. Reverse the order of things by buttoning this scarf at the back and presto! you have the fashionable draped cowl neckline.

WEAR FLOWERS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

With the return of feminine elegance and charm, women are again wearing real flowers. A single orchid secure in one of the very new and practical tube pins is the smart thing to wear on the shoulder of your chic bouclé suit, as photographed in the picture herewith. Orchids should always be worn stems down. With tailored clothes the small cypripedium or lady-slipper orchid is correct and ultra. What could be lovelier for formal occasions than a beautiful corsage of orchids, the aristocrat of the flower world? For evening, a corsage of two or three orchids simply tied with ribbon matching the flowers or stems is in high fashion.

Windswept Hats

A windswept effect is remarked on fashionable heads. Hair is dressed swept back from the face and hats are worn rolled back from foreheads.

NET AND PRINTED SATIN FOR MISSES

Net for junior misses is here in all its femininity and is displaying a great variety of trimming. Lace and metal combined with chiffon has been well indorsed in stiffened or starched finishes.

Tailored in silhouette, you can take your touches either in crisp effects or in the softer ruffy effects. Also, net is now being shown in the very happiest colors. There is something about black net, but it comes in appealing blues, the summer tones of yellow, peach.

Typical of net frocks was one in black, flared from the knee to the hemline—which showed considerable of a silver slipper and a gleaming buckle.

Also the juniors should know that printed satins in navy, brown, black, red, green—all with touches of white, are quite something for spring.

Now, the Shankless Shoe, Hardly Anything at All

Here's the latest development. After years of experimentation a shoe has been turned out that to all appearances is completely shankless. That means that in under the arch of your foot the sole simply vanishes into nothingness.

A black kid opera pump, for example, might have some sweet and lovely stitching as decoration which would extend right under the shoe, being joined under the arch by a seam running from sole to heel. In case you haven't caught on, this new system makes a size 8 foot look about 5, and 3 practically nothing at all.

Popular Dress Trimming

Hand taggings are in high favor as trimmings for day time and afternoon dresses and jacket costumes and lightweight woolen dresses and costumes are especially attractive when treated with this type of embellishment.

SYNOPSIS

At a dance, a visitor in the community, Neal Conrad, young lawyer, is impressed by Anne Chamberlain, pretty daughter of a shiftless farmer, perceiving her fine character. A few days later she accompanies him and his hostess, Mrs. Griffin, on a picnic. At the end of the day Neal declares his love. At Washington, on their honeymoon, the Conrads meet Clarence Hathaway, friend of Neal's, young diplomat. The young couple start housekeeping. Anne's health begins to fail. Neal, engrossed in politics, becomes neglectful of her happiness. Their son is born. In the ensuing eight years Neal's law practice and his position in politics both mount. A daughter has been born to Anne, but her beauty is fading. Clarence Hathaway visits the Conrads. He reproaches Neal for allowing Anne to "stagnate," and suggests Neal and Anne take a holiday, with him, in France. In Paris Anne is "rejuvenated," physically and sartorially. Hathaway, long secretly enamored, endeavors to win her from Neal, without success. The governor of his state offers Neal the appointment of senator in the United States senate. At Washington, a junior senator's wife, Anne finds her troubles begin with the selection of a home.

Another caller was coming up the steps, and Anne saw, with relief, that the new visitor was of a different type—was indeed herself timid and ill at ease, in spite of her pretty clothes and air of unmistakable good breeding. But this relief was short-lived. Madame Estavi, the wife of the third secretary of the Peruvian embassy, was herself a newcomer embarking on her first round of calls. She accepted the place by the fire so recently vacated, and sat holding herself very erect, with painful pauses, which Anne did not know how to fill in, between her civil, stilted little sentences. In the midst of one of these pauses, a fearful shriek rent the air; and an instant later, Nancy, with Junior in hot pursuit, tore wildly into the room, tripped over the rug, and fell sprawling on the floor between the two ladies.

The astonished caller rose, looking very much startled.

"I'm dreadfully sorry," Anne said wretchedly. "Really, they don't often act like this. Junior, go upstairs and wash that—that—whatever it is—off your face and hands. And stay there until I send for you. Please, Madame Estavi!"—But Madame Estavi had quietly and effectively vanished, and there were more callers coming up the steps. Before the riotous and untidy children could be eliminated, these callers were upon Anne.

The dreadful afternoon wore on. Anne, nervously keeping her eyes from the clock, was nevertheless aware that Neal would be expecting her, would be waiting for her, and yet she could not escape and go to him. At last the telephone rang sharply.

"Neal, dear," she whispered into the transmitter, "I can't come for you, I'm sorry. No, I can't speak any louder, there are people here, they'll hear me. No, I can't explain. No, I'm not sick. No, the children aren't either."

She returned to the drawing room certain that she had been overheard. Well, that was bad enough, but at least it meant that these intruding strangers would go—would leave her in peace. But it did not. Sensing that something was amiss, and eager to know what it was, they lingered to find out.

Neal let himself in with his latch-key, banging the door after him, and shouted to her from the hall.

"Why didn't you tell me you were going to have company?" he roared, "I waited, and waited . . ."

Neither of them ever referred again to the next few minutes. He strode into the little parlor, halted, and became dumb. Introductions were mumbled, but afterwards the silence deepened. One by one, disappointed, the callers departed. As the last one vanished from sight and hearing, Anne turned on her husband with a rage such as he had seldom seen her display.

"Don't you ever dare speak to me that way again!" she cried. "You ought to have realized I was in some difficulty and helped me out instead of making things ten times worse than they were already! You ought to have known that senators' wives have to receive on Thursdays and make hundreds and thousands of calls themselves other days, dropping little dog-eared cards from one end of Washington to the other. Tomorrow I'm going to get all this straightened out by some one who does know and will tell me all about it. I'll find out what I've got to do, and do it well."

"Why, Anne," said Neal gently, "I'm awfully sorry. I didn't think . . ." His own annoyance had vanished into thin air at the sight of her distress, which he did not minimize. He spoke with unaccustomed and unexpected tenderness. "Darling, it's all right. You'll get the hang of all this in no time. Anne—don't cry."

At nine o'clock the next morning, Anne called up the Vice President's house, and asked for Mrs. Hammel.

A smooth purring voice that sounded somehow, in spite of its smoothness, as if it might, upon occasion, grow dreadfully hard, answered. "Miss Butters speaking."

"This is Mrs. Neal Conrad, Senator Conrad's wife. I asked for Mrs. Hammel."

"Oh—but you see Mrs. Hammel never goes to the telephone, Mrs. Conrad. Couldn't you give me the message? I am her secretary, you know. I take all her messages. Every one who wishes to get in touch with Mrs. Hammel does so through me."

Again reproved, again convicted of ignorance! Anne felt herself flushing, alone in the little dark entry where her telephone hung. But she gritted her teeth.

"I wonder if she would let me come and see her? Today?"

"Today? Really, Mrs. Conrad, I doubt whether that would be possible. Mrs. Hammel would be delighted to see you of course, but she is very much engaged. Perhaps next week I could give you an appointment."

"Won't you ask her whether she would see me? It's really urgent."

"In that case . . . What is your telephone number, Mrs. Conrad? I will try to call you back a little later. But of course I can't promise."

Anne hung up the receiver, already regretting her sudden impulse to appeal to the Vice President's wife. As she lay in bed the evening before, miserably wakeful, she had remembered a "feature story" that she had read about Mrs. Hammel in the Inquirer the Sunday before. This article was accompanied by a picture of the lady herself, smiling, plump, bejeweled and beavored. But there was a look of real human kindness in the gentle eyes and soft mouth, and there was a paragraph in the article which had arrested Anne's attention especially:

"Mrs. Hammel before her marriage was a Miss Sarah Gown, a school teacher in the great western state which her distinguished husband has so rapidly 'put on the map.' When they first met he was a cattle herder. The early days of their marriage were spent on a ranch, sixty miles from the nearest village. Mrs. Hammel of course did all her own work, and, in the evenings, taught her husband, who had had fewer educational opportunities than herself, from the shabby textbooks which she had taken away with her from the mountain school."

There were other paragraphs after that, describing the rise in the Hammel fortunes, both political and financial. But they did not matter so much. What mattered was that Mrs. Hammel had once been a little country school teacher, like Anne herself, had suffered far more in her bridal days, and she had married a man who possessed far fewer advantages, of every kind, than Neal. And she had won through. But she must have had to learn, too; and perhaps, perhaps, she remembered how bitterly hard that learning was. . . .

The telephone rang. Miss Butters was speaking again, her voice even smoother and more purring than before.

"Oh, Mrs. Conrad . . . I gave Mrs. Hammel your message, and she will be pleased to see you at eleven. She is of course very much pressed, very much occupied, so I am sure you will understand and make your call brief. At eleven then—"

"It was Miss Butters," Anne said to herself as she buttoned on her little blue tulleur and jammed her small perky blue hat down over her curls, "who made up the last part of that message. Mrs. Hammel never said it at all. If she hadn't meant to be kind, she wouldn't have said she'd see me."

Anne was right. Mrs. Hammel did mean to be kind. She looked to the bewildered newcomer like a comfortable, middle-aged angel, her wings concealed by her perfect Worth gown of gray crepe de chine, but her halo almost distinguishable above the smooth ripples of her permanent wave. There was something very homey about her, in spite of the fact that she might have served as the personification of "What the Well-Dressed Woman (with unlimited means) Will Wear"; she almost patted Anne's hand as she shook it; and an uncanny degree of intelligence shone from the beams of her kindly eyes.

"So you're the wife of the new appointee to the senate? Bless me, how young you look—I shouldn't wonder if you're the senatorial baby. And pretty as a picture. Your husband's young, too, isn't he? Mr. Hammel's been watching his career with interest—he believes there's a big future ahead of him yet. And ahead of you, too, of course. I'm pleased you wanted to run in and see me like this. Was there something special—?"

Anne went straight to the point. In a few brief sentences she had outlined her background, upbringing, and previous experience. Then, with slightly more detail, she related the events of the afternoon before. Mrs. Hammel listened attentively. Once or twice the corners of her mouth twitched, and when Anne had finished she coughed a little behind a fine cambric handkerchief.

"Well, well," she said, "I don't know when I've been so much interested. And you thought of coming straight to me—which I'm very glad you did—on account of that article in the Inquirer. Are you on good terms with the press yourself?"

"I'm afraid not. You see—" Anne plunged into that story, too. This time Mrs. Hammel laughed outright.

"Yes, I've read some of these articles, and of course I realized they weren't overaccurate, but I didn't know just what lay behind them. Well, my dear, the first thing for you to do is to get a picture taken of yourself that does you justice—several of them—and then ring up Miss Sharp and ask her to come and have tea and a little chat with you."

WILL NOT ABANDON PLAN FOR HIGHWAY

Plans for building the six million dollar Ocean Shore highway will not be abandoned because of the sale of fifteen miles of right of way of the defunct Ocean Shore railroad to the Selah Chamberlain syndicate, it was announced last week by Supervisor Andrew J. Gallagher, of San Francisco, chairman of the San Mateo-San Francisco-Santa Cruz county district in charge of the road.

A new draft of plans may be necessary, including possible realignment of parts of the right of way. The three-counties commission may also decide to condemn the land sold to the Chamberlain group.

This is the section extending around Point San Pedro where it was proposed to start the first work. Sale of the strip was made known last week when Joseph J. Phillips, right of way agent for the commission, reopened negotiation on the deal, held up since last December to await allocation of state funds. J. W. Crosby, secretary of the defunct rail line, informed Phillips of the sale, according to a report by Phillips to the district commission.

It is sometimes possible to develop a magnetic personality without having everything charged.

MINING NOTES

President Roosevelt's control of money under the gold act is no mere temporary recovery measure. "It is a substantial shift of control, making the end of one era and the opening on another. So declares Prof. Raymond Moley in his magazine "Today," in a striking survey of the monetary program.

A gold brick weighing 1040 ounces has been shipped from the Cariboo Gold Quartz Mine, according to J. R. V. Dunlop, managing director of the company. The brick represents recovery from the mine of February and despite the short month, it is 140 ounces heavier than the brick in January.

Two reported rich strikes in the Bridge River district and a host of other favorable news held the interest of the market minded public. Gold strikes of considerable value are reported to have been made at the Bralorne mine and at the Bridge River Consolidated, arousing interest in both stocks on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

That the annual report of the Eldorado Gold Mines will be highly pleasing to the shareholders, was stated by Charles Labine, president of the company, in last week's Northern Miner.

Tuscarora Gold Mines Syndicate has obtained ten highly mineralized claims at the foot of Cadwallader Canyon in the Bridge River District, according to the trustees of the syndicate. Assays taken from the surface outcroppings show values of $1.80 to $3.10 indicating that the property is in the heart of a valuable mineral zone.

Hercules Consolidated Mining Corporation will begin placer operations on their leased ground at Amadore Creek, near Stanley in the Cariboo District, it is announced.

Pacific Eastern Gold Mines Ltd., owning 70 claims and fractions adjoining Pioneer mine on the southeast, Bridge River district, is working a crew of eight men on the Dan Tucker claim, where a crosscut is being run.

The gross mineral wealth of British Columbia in 1930 was $68,000,000, of which the government's share was $1,400,000. In 1933 the value dwindled to $29,000,000, of which the government received $400,000 in taxes.

Australia will follow the lead of Northern Canada in the matter of aerial prospecting, under direction of the most complete gold prospecting expedition ever organized in that dominion, and which has already begun operations at Kalgoorlie. The air survey equipment includes two planes and a ground organization of seven motor vehicles, three houses, a hanger, mobile wireless apparatus and photographic laboratories, with personnel consisting of surveyors, geologists, geophysicists and men versed in ordinary prospecting. The work is expected to take two years.

With prospects for monetization of silver brightened by recent world developments Helena Gold Mines Limited announced last week that they have acquired control of Van Roi Silver Lead mine at Silverton, in the Slovan district.

OCEAN SHORE RAILROAD SEEKS COSTS OF LITIGATION

An echo of the state's attempt to condemn Ocean Shore railroad rights-of-way on the coastside for the new Ocean Shore boulevard was heard in Redwood City superior court last Monday, when the railroad company and the McNee Company, joint owners of the holdings, filed an action to compel Joint Highway District No. 9 to pay the costs of the litigation. The companies seek a writ of mandate ordering the district to show cause why it should not be compelled to pay the costs, which were fixed by the court following the condemnation litigation. The companies charge the district has refused to meet the $5,803 costs set.

HE KNEW HOW TO ORDER

She: "So you're going to France. Do you know how to speak the language? Suppose you want to say egg, what do you say?"

He: "Just say 'off.'"

She: "Suppose you want two eggs, what do you say?"

He: "You say 'two off,' and the silly old waiter gives you three, and you give him one back. Simple language."

Knowing that we must eventually shuffle off the mortal coil, most of us hope that we may do it painlessly. So did one H. W. Dyer, of Lewisham, England, who padded his neck so that he might hang himself comfortably. But it didn't work, so he is recovering after a mild choking spell.

Life insurance statistics show that fat people are more likely to be killed in accidents than skinny ones. But, come to think of it, this is no great mystery in view of their handicap when forced to move rapidly to avoid being run down by Fords, Austins and automobiles.

SAFETY RULES LISTED FOR MOTOR TRAVEL

With the touring season opening early and traffic on highways steadily increasing, attention is drawn to various rules of safe driving in a timely statement by the Public Safety Department of the California State Automobile Association. The motorists organization lists some of the principal rules as follows:

Mechanical Condition—Have the car inspected regularly to make sure that there are no dangerous mechanical defects. Carefully note the condition of tires, brakes, and lights.

Speed—Common sense rather than the speedometer should be the guide, meanwhile obeying speed regulations. A certain pace may be safe under some conditions yet distinctly dangerous under others.

Strange Roads—Drive carefully on an unfamiliar road, particularly if it happens to be rough.

Passing—When traffic is heavy it is safer to stay in line. Never cut out of line unless certain that there is time to pass without endangering other cars.

Safe Distance—When following another car keep at a safe distance. The car may stop suddenly.

Sudden Stopping—Except in an emergency, sudden stopping should be avoided, as it may result in a rear end collision or other accident.

Grade Crossings—Drive cautiously at railroad grade crossings and shift to second or low gear before passing over tracks.

Hand Signals—Never fail to signal when stopping, turning, or changing to another traffic lane. Make signals clearly and unmistakably.

Traffic Signals—Signals are for safety and should be obeyed. Little time is gained in "beating" a traffic signal, and a bad accident may result.

INJURED WHILE DIGGING DITCH

Emmet Brant, 24, of Redwood City, suffered a possible fractured left shoulder, chest injuries and bruises, according to hospital attaches at Palo Alto when a 11-foot ditch he was digging on the Stanford campus caved in, burying him up to his shoulders.

LEGION AUXILIARY NOTES OF INTEREST

Daly City Unit No. 410, American Legion Auxiliary, will participate in the whist and dance to be held in the Redwood City Legion hall tomorrow night, Saturday, March 24. All proceeds go to the convention fund for the San Mateo County Council of the American Legion and the American Legion Auxiliary. Refreshments will be served. Everyone is cordially invited and are assured a good time.

The Sewing Club will not meet next Monday, due to vacation. The next meeting will be on Monday, April 2, at the home of Margaret Miller, and everyone is welcome.

The drill team of the San Mateo County Council is progressing rapidly under the able leadership of Comrade Craft. Individual practice is being held in the separate units, besides the regular drill every Thursday evening. With the enthusiasm and hard work that is being put into this activity, we expect to make an impressive appearance at the coming convention. G. J. H.

Mrs. Gavin Suffers Nervous Breakdown

Mrs. Constance May Gavin, who recently was awarded one million dollars as her share of the estate of James L. Flood, multi-millionaire mining magnate, is reported confined to her home in Los Angeles, suffering from a nervous breakdown. Her condition was attributed to the long legal fight she waged before she established her claim for a daughter's share of the Flood millions. Friends said she was further worried by the subsequent suit of K. Ford, San Francisco attorney, for one-eighth of the money for legal services.

Jefferson Team Going Good

The Jefferson Pajose baseball team from Jefferson Union high school won its fifth game on Thursday of last week by defeating Balboa by the score of 6 to 5, playing two extra innings to win. The stars of the game were John Compagno and Bob Fleming. The tying run came in on a hit by Fleming, and Compagno hit in the winning run with a triple. Manager Foley also helped during the game by getting a triple and single.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 6 FRIDAY, MARCH 23, 1934 NUMBER 35

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

Little Tommy had just received a sound whipping, and protested: "You're awful hard on me, mother."

"But that's because you've been a very naughty and wicked boy," was the reply.

"Gee whiz," protested Tommy, "you should remember that you didn't die young yourself."

Coal Heat is Safe Heat.

Maybe the good die young, but chances are that if they had lived they would have grown up to be just as mean as the rest of us.

Sam: "What would you do if you had two aces an' de other nigh-gah had three?"

Ham: "Hunt fo' my razor, child."

"Goodness, gracious, Hiram," protested the farmer's wife, "what makes you say 'By gosh' and 'jimmie gee' so much and go around with a straw in your mouth?"

"Well, those summer boarders are coming in next week. If some of us don't talk and act that way, they'll think we aren't country folks at all."

Kindling and Block Wood.

"How did you happen to become a chipodist?" he was asked.

"Well, you see, it was like this," he replied. "I was always at the foot of my class in school."

"Why keep worrying about the children?"

"I can't help it."

"But, my dear, you are hurting your bridge game."

It's funny. A woman who can spot a blonde hair on your coat at ten paces can't see a pair of garage doors.

"But, Dorothy, are you not getting Jack and Bill confused?"

"Sure. I get Jack confused one night and Bill the next."
